Want to Type in an East Asian Language?

Here’s how you can:

- Right click on the Windows Taskbar; it’s the blue bar at the bottom of the screen
- Click on “Toolbars,” and then “Language bar”

- Click on the little white triangle that appears, and choose “Settings”

- In the window that pops up, click on the blue box to the left of the language you want (Chinese, Japanese or Korean)
- Click on the “Add” button and then on the little box next to “Keyboard layout/IME” in the window that opens
- Click “Ok,” then “Apply,” and then “Ok”

- Finally, click on the “EN” box that appears on the Windows Taskbar and choose the language you want

- That’s it, and you are now able to enjoy typing in a different language!
